1.) Plot Twist

As the order was given for the assassination of Snow-White, the Huntsman sprang into action, guiding the beautiful maiden deep inside the woods for a afternoon stroll, the Huntsman was ready for the kill, He took out his hunting knife and was about to stab it into her innocent heart when she began to cry, saying, "Oh, dear huntsman, let me live. I will run into the wild woods and never come back." Because she was so beautiful the huntsman took pity on her, and he said, "Run away, you poor child." And then realized that his decision would take a toll on his life and family, as soon as the Huntsman got back to the castle to report to the queen, He told her how the assassination went well and showed her proof of the kill, a lung and a liver, although it is not of Snow-White but from a wild boar, she commended him for a job well done. As the queen was getting ready for a feast with the alleged body parts of Snow-White, the Huntsman readied his Bow and aimed at the Queen's head, as he released the arrow it dashed across the room hitting the queen at the back of her throat. Blood came gushing out of her mouth and life began to whisk away from her body. The Huntsman woke up, as if he was unable to control his body and thoughts during his attack on the Queen, the door was quickly opened and there he saw someone he thought was familiar. It was Snow-White quickly alarming the guards that the Queen was murdered by a Huntsman, the guards hurriedly sprang into a frenzy, violently clubbing the Huntsman till he can't run nor stand up. As he was near to death he looked unto Snow-White, her white-skin and Black hair was beautiful as ever, but when he looked upon her eyes, he saw the most dark and empty place that he had ever seen, the eyes of a demon looking at him with a dead gaze. As he lay down and died, Snow-White lived on, inheriting everything her step-mother "The Queen" owned and began to learn the art of witchcraft, empowering her even more. The kingdom was then ruled by a witch as white as snow, as red as blood, and as black as the night.

2.) The Dwarven Army

Now it came to pass that a prince entered these woods and happened upon the dwarfs' house, where he sought shelter for the night. He saw the coffin on the mountain with beautiful Snow-White in it, and he read what was written on it with golden letters. Then he said to the dwarfs, "Let me have the coffin. I will give you anything you want for it." But the dwarfs answered, "We will not sell it for all the gold in the world." In utter disbelief the prince unsheathed his sword and swung it towards the dwarfs, as he was about to slay a dwarf an arrow came piercing down his head. It was an archer dwarf, they told him about the prince's plans to take Snow-White away from them and make her a trophy of some sorts. As the archer was given light about the recent events the archer informed them about the plan to assassinate the Queen by the order of the Council of the throne including the King himself, As he too knows the truth about the death of his daughter and left him no choice. Some time passed and the Queen was talking to the magic mirror again, but before she could utter a word, the doors to her chamber were broken down, windows started to shatter and the walls began to set on fire. She looked down and saw hundreds of dwarfs in knights armor marching towards her, fear soon took over her body, freezing in place and she felt overwhelmed by despair. Soon hundreds of swords began slashing her body, arrows piercing every skin, fires burning her hair off, and then death. After the Queen's death, at Snow-White's throat was the piece of poisoned apple that she had bitten off and was dislodged. Not long afterward she opened her eyes, lifted the lid from her coffin, sat up, and was alive again. The King rejoiced and the army was thrilled to see the princess live again, evening came and the whole kingdom held a big feast for a new beginning.

3.) The Grand Battle

The prince said joyfully, "You are with me." He told her what had happened, and then said, "I love you more than anything else in the world. Come with me to my father's castle. You shall become my wife." Snow-White loved him, and she went with him. Their wedding was planned with great splendor and majesty. After planning her wedding that should take place three-months prior, Snow-White began to study the art of witchcraft and wizardry, high ranking mages and witches were her mentors, and thus began to know the ways of high-level magic.

Snow-White's godless stepmother was also invited to the feast. After putting on her beautiful clothes she stepped before her mirror and said:

Mirror, mirror, on the wall,

Who in this land is fairest of all?

The mirror answered:

You, my queen, are fair; it is true.

But the young queen is a thousand times fairer than you.

The wicked woman uttered a curse, and she became so frightened, so frightened, that she did not know what to do. At first she did not want to go to the wedding, but she found no peace. She had to go and see the young queen. When she arrived she recognized Snow-White, and terrorized, she could only stand there without moving.

Then Snow-White began to move towards her and then cast a fireball towards her, the Queen began to retaliate back with a ward to protect her. The fireball disintegrated and Snow-White began casting spell after another spell, the Queen fought back with spells of her own, using different kinds of magic the whole castle was in a panic. Everyone at the castle began to evacuate as the fight of the two continued, Snow-white then made a decisive choice, casting a spell using her blood, then a dark night began to shadow the whole castle, apparitions of the dead began to manifest, legions of souls appeared before the Queen. They were the souls of those that fought for the Queen who appeared to have a great grudge for using them as toys and experiments for her witchcraft. They all began to attack the Queen, slicing her arms off, maiming off every limb, and dragging the Queen straight to the underworld. The darkness soon disappeared and the whole kingdom was back to the way it was, the wedding then came and the prince and Snow-White were full of joy and happiness. The kingdom then was ruled by them, and it became known as the greatest kingdom the world knows.
